ORIGIN OF THE SUICIDE MINE.

(Original.)

I had tramped all over Colorado with pick and shovel and hadn't taken out any more paying dirt than would keep body and soul from flying apart. One time I was working a hole by myself and camping alone on Clear creek. I was sitting at night in my tent—I was only staying temporarily—reading some old letters by the light of a candle for the want of something better to pass the time till I turned in, when suddenly I looked up to see the most forlorn face, the most dejected pair of eyes, looking straight at me out of the darkness. I started as though I'd seen a ghost. When I determined it was only a man, and an inoffensive man at that, I swore at him for startling me.

"Stranger," he said, "can you lend me something to blow my brains out with?"

"I'll blow 'em out for you," I answered sharply, "if you don't quit looking at me that way."

"I've been prospecting without finding anything till I'm dead tired of the business. I've got a family in the east that's depending on me, and I haven't anything to send 'em. The wife's sick, and they're about to be fired from the hut they're in. Say, stranger, lend me your gun."

"See here, my friend, I'm pretty hard up myself. If I lend you my gun, it will be useless without a cartridge. Now, I don't see any use wasting ammunition that way. Just you wait a minute and I'll think up a way for you to get rid of yourself without costing anything. I have it. You keep right on. I've seen the north star up there? Well, you follow that star for about a mile and you'll walk off a cliff into an abyss 500 feet deep. There are rocks below—pointed rocks—and they'll make mince meat of you."

"Much obliged," the strange man answered. "I'll do it. How far did you say it is?"

"Just a mile. You cross a rise in the ground, then walk on a level till you come to a sort of ravine. Cross the ravine, count about a hundred steps, and you'll be right on the brink of the precipice."

I AM A MOTHER

How many American women in lonely homes to-day long for this blessing to come into their lives, and to be able to utter these words, but because of some organic derangement this happiness is denied them.

Every woman interested in this subject should know that preparation for healthy maternity is accomplished by the use of LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND. Mrs. Maggie Gilmer, of West Union, N. C., writes to Mrs. Pinkham: "I was greatly run-down in health from a weakness peculiar to my sex, when Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me. It not only restored me to perfect health, but to my delight I am a mother."

Mrs. Josephine Hall, of Bardonia, N. Y., writes: "I was a very great sufferer from female trouble, and my physician failed to help me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound not only restored me to perfect health, but I am now a proud mother."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

"Much obliged to you, stranger. I reckon I'll find it."

"You can't miss it. It extends ten miles to your right and five to your left straight across your path. Keep looking up at the north star, and you won't know when you get to it."

There wasn't any use of his looking up to avoid seeing the gulf, for the divide was high on either hand, shutting out so much sky that nobody could see two steps ahead. He went on, after thanking me again for putting him on to such an economical way of killing himself, and I started in once more on my letters. I was thinking of getting into my blankets when the fellow came back.

"What's the matter?" I said. "Didn't you come to it?"

"Well, yes," he said. "I came to it all right. I crossed the rise and the ravine, then counted my steps till they numbered ninety-five. Then I thought I'd like to see how near the gulf I was, so I took a match out of my pocket and struck it. There, not ten steps from me, was the great black darkness, and I knew I was right on to it. Somehow it scared me."

"You shouldn't have lit the match," I said. "You should have walked right off the cliff without knowing where you were going to fall. You've spoiled the whole business."

"I reckon I'd rather do the job with a gun. I've got something here that's worth a dozen cartridges." And he handed out a little brown stone.

"What do you mean?" I asked.

"Well, the match I lit shone on something bright. I picked up this stone and saw that the flame was shining on particles of gold."

I moved the stone about in the light of the candle, and it sparkled from various parts.

"See here," I said to the stranger. "You turn in here with me, and tomorrow we'll go down and hunt for more of this. Maybe we can find the place."

"It's right on the edge of the gulf," I said. "There isn't any gulf. I knew you wouldn't walk into it anyway. Only lunatics choose horrible deaths, and I saw by your eye that you were not a lunatic. You're only discouraged. The abyss you saw was created by your imagination."

I gave him something to eat and a couple of my blankets. He was tired out and slept soundly till morning, when I put some bacon, hard tack and a tin cup full of coffee into him. Then we started toward the gulf. When we got to the top of the rise I had mentioned we looked across the ravine, and there was nothing but dead level ahead to the foot of the divide. The man looked at it astonished. We counted ninety-five steps due north from the ravine and began to pick up nuggets.

Well, that's what led up to the discovery of the Suicide mine. The stranger and I have long been pals, and either of us could sell out for a million. He built a fine house and brought his family out to live in it. He took me in and returned the loan of a couple of blankets when he was a would-be suicide with a suit of apartments in his home and an elder down gulf to cover me nights.

He did more than this. He had a daughter who thought a lot of me, knowing that I'd saved her father, and he gave me her too. All the luck for all of us was started by my reckoning that the man who wanted to kill himself would shrink from death if I made it frightful enough.

THE SCRAP BOOK

The Dramatic Instinct.

Professor Brandt Matthews in a lecture on theatrical conventions to a class in dramatic theory the other day told the following story:

"A little girl had dramatized a sofa pillow into a horse and had ridden on the horse to her mother's knee. 'Horse is thirsty, mamma,' she said. To humor her the mother brought a glass of water, but the little one carefully emptied the water in a jardiniere before offering the glass to her pillow. 'A pretended horse ought to drink pretended water,' she remarked gravely."

Doing Her Best.

"That Mrs. Popley," said Miss Grouch, "is the most slovenly housekeeper I ever saw."

"But," protested Miss Goodley, "she has a big family of growing boys."

"All the more shame to her, for she should know that cleanliness is next to godliness," and—

"She says it's next to 'impossible,'"—Catholic Standard and Times.

Unimportant.

"But," demanded the first professor of theology, "how can you call his thesis excellent if, as you say, some of his arguments are extremely irrelevant?"

"You didn't catch my remark correctly," replied the other. "I said 'irrelevant.'"

"Oh, that's a different thing!"—Philadelphia Press.

SUFFRAGETTES WIN COMMONS

House Passes Woman's Enfranchisement Bill

BY VOTE OF 271 TO 92

Demonstrations in Streets—Action Taken on First Reading in Committee of the Whole—Women Plan to Continue the Fight.

London, Feb. 29.—The Woman's Enfranchisement bill passed its first reading in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon by a vote of 271 to 92, and as soon as the news reached Westminster Palace yard, the waiting crowd of excited women suffragists who had assembled there broke out in loud applause and cheering. The measure, which was introduced by Henry Yorke Stanger, Liberal member from North Kensington, is identified with the bill of W. H. Dickinson, member of the House for the North Division of St. Pancras, which was defeated March 8, 1907.

Herbert Gladstone, the house secretary, who spoke in behalf of the government, said he left the decision of the House to the views of its individual members. He declared that personality he favored the principles of the bill, but he thought that the great mass of public opinion would have to be moved before any effect could be given to it. Undoubtedly, Mr. Gladstone continued, there has been a great and growing movement in favor of granting suffrage to women, but it still lacks numbers, and it has been demonstrated that women as a whole desire to secure the privilege of voting.

The opponents to the bill made no objection to the vote of the House being taken, and as the promoters of the measure consented to its reference to a committee of the whole House, the bill is effectively shelved for the present session. This course of procedure enabled the members of the House to treat the bill rather in the nature of a resolution expressing their "pious opinion" than as an actual legislative proposal.

Party lines were completely ignored in the voting. Great crowds of women awaited the result in the vicinity of the House of Commons, and strong detachments of police, mounted and on foot, had been brought up to guard against possible disturbance. Beyond cheering the known supporters, there was little demonstration, and the women soon dispersed to attend a congratulatory meeting, at which their future course of action was discussed.

THE OYSTERMAN.

His Work Is Hard, and the Returns Are Often Meager.

The life of an oysterman is by no means an easy one. At the first sign of dawn in all kinds of weather except when the river is frozen the oysterman leaves his home and if the breeze is fair sails the six or eight miles to his working grounds. Arriving there, he drops his anchor and puts his tongs overboard.

All day long he manipulates them with varying results. Sometimes he finds a particularly good bed, and the tongs will bring up oysters more often than they are put overboard, but more often there are more stones and shells in the tongs than there are good oysters. The catch is then culled—that is, all under-sized oysters and shells are cleaned out and thrown overboard. At least this is what is supposed to be done; but, judging from the cargoes often brought here, the law is very often a dead letter. When the catch is culled it is sold to the river boats and by them brought to market. Few oystermen market their own catch, but some own the river boats in which they are brought to market.—Washington Star.

DOCTORS MISTAKES

Are said often to be buried six feet under ground. But many times women call on their family physicians, suffering as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heart disease, another from liver or kidney disease, another from nervous prostration, another with pain here and there, and in this way they present alike to themselves and their easy-going or over-busy doctor, separate diseases, for which he assumes them to be sick. In reality, they are all only symptoms caused by some uterine disease. The physician, ignorant of the cause of suffering, keeps up his treatment until large bills are made. The suffering woman gets no better in the end, and the wrong treatment, but probably worse. A proper medicine like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription directed to the cause would have removed the disease, thereby dispelling all those distressing symptoms, and instituting comfort instead of prolonged misery. It has been well said, that "a disease known is half cured."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific medicine, carefully devised by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate system. It is made of native American medicinal roots and is perfectly harmless in its effects. It is the only medicine for the female system.

As a powerful invigorating tonic "Favorite Prescription" imparts strength to the whole system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. For overworked, "worn-out," run-down, debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," housekeepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequalled as an appetizing codifier and restorative tonic.

As a soothing and strengthening nerve tonic "Favorite Prescription" is unequalled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the uterus. It is indeed, refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and depression. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate the stomach, liver and bowels. One to three a dose. Easy to take as candy.

MAGAZINE REVIEW.

Oriental Etiquette.

A peasant named Ali, according to a good old Oriental chestnut, needing badly a donkey for some urgent work, decided to apply to his neighbor, named Mehmed, whose donkey Ali knew to be idle in the stable that day.

"I am sorry, my dear neighbor," said Mehmed, in reply to Ali's request, "but I cannot please you. My son took the donkey this morning to the next village."

"I assure you," insisted Ali, "I shall take the very best care of him, my dear neighbor."

"Can you not take my word?" demanded Mehmed with a show of anger. "I tell you the donkey is out."

"But"—at this point the donkey began to bray loudly. "There. That is the donkey braying now."

"Well," said the justly indignant Mehmed, "if you would rather take my donkey's word than my word, we can be friends no longer, and under no circumstances can I lend you anything."—Everybody's Magazine.

What Hughes Learned from His Father.

Burton J. Hendrick, whose articles on "Great American Fortunes" are known throughout the country, contributes an article on Hughes to the March McClure's. This article unveils an unusual personality and is withal most entertaining reading. Governor Hughes once remarked facetiously, apropos of current stories of his reserve and coolness, that he hoped a coroner's autopsy would discover something in him beside audacity and useful information. Mr. Hendrick has happily forestalled the coroner and gives his readers a glimpse of the governor of New York state.

Charles E. Hughes was the son of a Welsh clergyman who reared him in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. "At an early age," said the father, "I taught my son that a straight line was the shortest distance between two points," a lesson he has had occasion to use in his public career.

In 1884 Hughes passed the bar examinations with a rating of 99½, attracting the attention of Walter S. Carter, one of New York's most successful lawyers. He became one of "Carter's kids" and married his oldest daughter.

"It is an interesting coincidence that the Carter firm's largest client, when Hughes entered the office, was the New York Life Insurance company, whose irregularities he afterward so mercilessly exposed."
